LOCAL

—The Territorial Legislature will meet on the 29th of this month.

—One year ago today the first train on the Canadian Northern entered Edmonton.

—Tribune.—Major Burditt, of the Salvation Army, leaves tomorrow to inspect the various posts between Winnipeg, Regina and Prince Albert. On November 1st, he will open new barracks at Edmonton.

—S. C. Archibald, who was in charge of the Beaver Hills creamery during the past season, arrived in Edmonton last night. The creamery suspended operations for this year the first of October after a very successful season.

—The Ladies' Aid Society of the Edmonton Presbyterian church, is holding a sale of goods in the basement of the church this afternoon. In the evening the ladies of the church will serve dinner, after which a musical program will be rendered.

—Jos. Hostyn, proprietor of the Edmonton hotel has received four large cases of stuffed birds, being a collection of British Columbia specimens. These new decorations of the office and waiting room of the Edmonton hotel, several handsome deer heads are also arranged in prominent places in these rooms.

—The Clara Mathes Company showed to a crowded house last night and the large audience were greatly pleased with the entertainment. A Royal Show was the name of the play presented, and each member of the company acted his part very creditably. The company will present the comedy drama, Only a Soldier Boy, this evening.

—Leader.—A meeting of His Honor the Lieutenant Governor and the judges of the Supreme Court was held yesterday afternoon at the court house and the following gentlemen were appointed a committee to select candidates for the Rhodes Scholarships: His Honor the Lieutenant Governor, the Chief Justice, the resident judge of Regina, the Deputy Commissioner of Education, and the principal of the Normal School.

—C. F. Cise, of Montreal, assistant general manager of the Bell Telephone Company, and Jno. E. Hull, of Calgary, are in Edmonton today, interviewing Alex Taylor, president of the Edmonton Bell Telephone Company.

The long distance telephone from Cardston in December. The poles are all laid as far as Ponoka, and a wiring gang has started from Calgary. The long distance line will be set in use from town to town as required. Where the towns are large enough a regular telephone system will be established. Mr. Cise remarks that it is very improbable that Edmonton will have more than one telephone system.

—Regina West.—People of Regina are again reminded forcibly of the frailty and shortness of life through the death of H. L. Beaton, which occurred at Victoria hospital early this morning. The deceased, who was but 26 years of age, has been quite unwell for the past four or five weeks, but did his utmost to keep up and around until after his law examinations, which he succeeded in passing with honors. Mr. Beaton was one of the popular young men of Regina. He was fighting the battle of life alone and had he succeeded would have been, no doubt, a good example of a self-made man. He has been in the office of MacKenzie and Brown for a number of years. Mr. Beaton had many friends in Edmonton who sincerely regret his early and untimely death.

—E. V. Chase, who has spent the last few months in Edmonton, left this morning for Winnipeg. Mr. Chase and W. B. Moore, of Chicago, have arranged to make a six months' tour of the States of the middle west, including Iowa, Nebraska, and Missouri. They will show numerous interesting and instructive views of the Canadian west and will fully describe the views presented. These views are of several classes. One set deals exclusively with actual views of the great and practically unexplored northern country. All the different branches of the great fur trade and the vast natural resources of the country, are clearly shown in the views. Another set are the views of the Edmonton district, showing different harvest scenes, etc. Besides these, numerous views of various sections of western Canada will be shown. This tour should result in a great deal of good to western Canada.

ACCIDENTALLY SHOT

The reported murder of a Galician at Woodstock, which appeared in yesterday's Bulletin, turns out to be an accidental shooting accident. The Galician was handling a loaded gun, when it accidentally discharged, killing him.

WRITTEN IN 1814

In 1814 Gabriel Franchère was a visitor to the wild Northwest. In his narrative of that trip he says:

"The river Saskatchewan flows over a bed composed of sand and marl, which contributes not a little to diminish the purity and transparency of its waters, which, like those of the Missouri, are turbid and whitish."

"Except for that it is one of the prettiest rivers in the world. The banks are perfectly charming and offer in many places a scene the fairest, the most smiling and the best diversified that can be seen or imagined; hills in varied forms, crowned with superb groves, valleys agreeably embroidered at evening and morning by the prolonged shadow of the hills, and of the woods which adorn them, herds of light footed antelope and heavy, colossal buffaloes—the former bounding along the slopes of the hills, the latter tramping under their heavy feet the verdure of the plains; all these charming beauties reflected and doubled, as it were, by the waters of the river; the melodious and varied songs of a thousand birds perched on the treetops; the refreshing breath of the zephyrs, the serenity of the sky; all in purity and sublimity of the air; all in a word, pour contentment and joy into the soul of the enchanted spectator."

"It is above all in the morning when the sun is rising, and in the evening, when it is setting, that the spectacle is really ravishing. I could not detach my regards from the superb picture, till the ancient obscurity obliterated its perception. Then, to the sweet pleasure that I tasted, succeeded a triste, not to say a sombre melody. How comes it to pass, I said, that so beautiful a country is not inhabited by human creatures?"

The songs, the hymns, the prayers of the laborer and the artisan, shall they never be heard in these fine plains? Wherefore, while in Europe, and above all in England, so many thousands of men do not possess and cultivate their own inch of ground, and cultivate the soil of their country for the sake of their own existence?"

"Wherefore do so many millions of acres of apparently fat and fertile land remain uncultivated and absolutely useless? Or at least do they support useless? Or at least do they support useless? Or at least do they support useless? Or at least do they support useless?"

HOG RAISING IN NORTHERN ALBERTA

Some few weeks ago the Bulletin called to the attention of its readers the advisability of going in extensively for hog raising in this district. The last issue of the Farmer's Advocate in the following article supplements that advice:

"Some good sales of hogs have recently been made in Edmonton and Strathcona. Northern Alberta is an ideal country for successful hog raising and dairying. The two industries go well together, and the number of creameries now in operation between Calgary and Edmonton shows that a great deal of valuable hog feed, in the form of dairy by-products, exists along that railway line. The brisk demand which the local meat-packing establishments create, and the good outlook for high prices in this neighborhood next season, owing to the strong probability of large supplies being required for the railway construction gangs, which are almost certain to be in operation then, is a sufficient guarantee that farmers would do well to go in more extensively for hog-raising than they have in the past. Sometimes when grain becomes damaged in any way, it can often be fed to hogs so as to obtain a price equal to or greater than its market value had it been first-class, and in addition there is an advantage in returning the fertility to the soil in the form of manure.

"With present prospects, it is good advice to recommend the raising of more hogs where conditions are similar to those mentioned above."

EXPERIMENTAL FARM FOR NORTHERN ALBERTA

A recent issue of the Farmer's Advocate contains the following article: "As the 'Farmer's Advocate' has pointed out editorially, Alberta should have an experimental farm, and especially the northern portion of it. This great tract of country being in an initial stage of development, it can be accomplished by investigation. Accurate information given now means individual success in numerous cases, where otherwise temporary discouragement at least might be the result.

"Winter wheat where cultivated seems to be giving very good results. It has the advantage of ripening before danger of frost, which is worth considerable. It has been suggested that perhaps the Early Gemma Giant would be found a suitable variety. It is a heavy-yielding sort, stiff in the straw, and produces one of the best qualities of grain of the large-yielding varieties of white wheats. If any of our readers have tried this wheat, we would be pleased to have them communicate results to our office in Calgary.

"In some districts the Banner oat seems to be a general favorite, while in other neighborhoods the Big Four comes in for a fair share of patronage. The Abundance, and Early Dawson, two earlier varieties, are also grown freely in some places visited. Mr. Tate, of Lacombe, has grown the Banner and Abundance side by side, and claims that the Abundance is ten or twelve days earlier and nearly as good a cropper.

"Mr. P. A. Switzer, one of Lacombe's leading farmers, grows the Early Dawson and Banner, and Mr. Switzer finds that the Early Dawson matures about two weeks earlier than the Banner, but on an average yields from ten to fifteen bushels less per acre. He further states that with him the Banner matures well when sown early, and is a very heavy yielder.

"The Daubeny is a variety of oat which might do well in this district. It is very early, produces a medium length of straw, not so plump and heavy as some varieties, is one of the thinnest hulled kinds, being well suited for the manufacture of oatmeal. If any of our readers are growing this variety, we would like to have their experience.

"Progressive seed merchants of Northern Alberta would do well to prepare to supply the demand for a good range of early maturing kinds of grain."

A JOURNALIST'S VIEW

Mr. Rudolph Bach, a German journalist who recently visited this district, in an interview with the Winnipeg Free Press says: "The progress since my previous visit is actually astonishing. I found in course of question there two hundred buildings of various kinds, and the very atmosphere seemed charged with the spirit of energy and development everywhere apparent. The values of real estate have advanced considerably and the citizens are buoyant with hope for the future greatness of the sturdy young metropolis. The crops of the surrounding country are good. But the roads! They are in a most deplorable condition, and the government should do something to improve them. The lively stable keepers refused to allow their horses to go over them.

"There are a large number of German settlers in the Edmonton district, and I took special pains to interrogate them on their condition. I found them invariably contented with the success that has attended their efforts so far and well satisfied with their present condition and prospects. I found the Galicians there, as elsewhere in the west where they have settlements, to be an industrious and prosperous people. These people are quickly adopting the methods of the country, and I am sure by the time the next generation of them reaches young manhood, they will have been assimilated with their English speaking fellow citizens.

"There is one thing I would like to say, and that is everywhere I went the people expressed themselves as being strongly in favor of the construction of the Grand Trunk Pacific railway. They feel that the continuous prosperity and development of the country depends in a very large measure on having ample transportation facilities furnished by competing lines. The sentiment in favor of this new transcontinental enterprise is practically unanimous throughout the west, for I heard none but active politicians criticize it adversely. Now I am not a politician, and being a German subject take no part in your politics, but I may be at liberty to say this much: If the G.T.P. railway project is a factor in the coming elections, the opposition will be astonished to find how few supporters their views have, especially among the farmers."
